

Australian Market Update

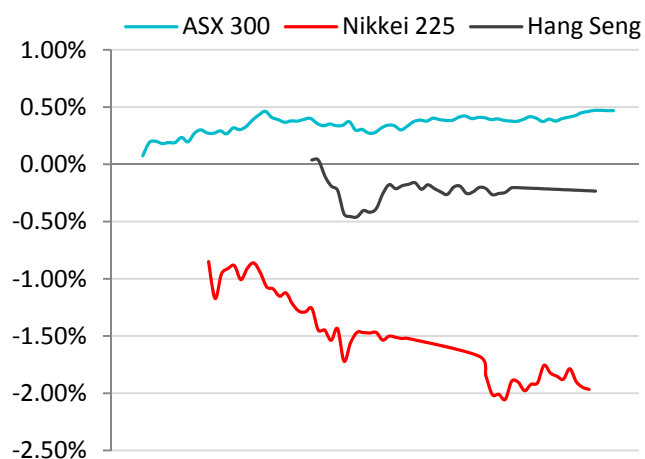

Asian stocks slump as ASX rallies on domestic data

Asian stocks posted broad losses today with the Nikkei-225 plummeting about 2% as the yen surged against the dollar and Chinese stocks falling after a report showed foreign direct investment (FDI) slumped. Asian markets also retreated today as the World Bank cut its global growth forecast for 2013 to 2.4%, down from a forecast of 3% in June last year and below the Bloomberg consensus estimate of 3.2%. The World Bank cited government austerity measures, high unemployment and low business confidence that will weigh on the growth outlook for developed nations. The World Bank said that "the global economic environment remains fragile and prone to further disappointment, although the balance of risks is now less skewed to the downside than it has been in recent years". The local market managed to post a 0.5% gain today, extending a positive start after Westpac said Australian consumer confidence increased 0.6% this month and a report showed Australian new motor vehicle sales surged 17.9% from a year earlier in December.
